

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

My sincere gratitude is extended to Paul Jooste (Oupa Uil) whose inexhaustible enthusiasm sparked the opportunity to conduct this study and who has spent many hours, day and night, out on the roads collecting specimens. I wish him many happy hours of owling during his retirement. To Dr. Victor Wepener, my promoter, for his supervision, advice and guidance throughout the course of this dissertation. His wisdom and encouragement has been a great inspiration.

This study could not have been undertaken without the financial assistance granted by the NRF and R.A.U., whose generosity I acknowledge. Thanks go to the Department of Zoology at the Rand Afrikaans University for access to laboratory equipment and materials for this study. My thanks are also extended to the staff of the Zoology Department, R.A.U. From the Endangered Wildlife Trust I thank Prof. Gerhard Verdoorn, Jenny le Roux and the owl project committee for their input and views.

I also thank the Gauteng Directorate of Nature Conservation, particularly Dr. Dean Peinke and Dr. Craig Whittington-Jones for allowing me to partake in the small mammal surveys. I wish to thank Andrew Hankey of the Witwatersrand Botanical Gardens for help in identifying plants. I am also very grateful to Theresa of the Transvaal Museum, Pretoria for allowing the opportunity to study reference skulls of small mammals. Ms. Pieta Compaan of Gauteng Directorate of Nature Conservation for analysing data points onto the various maps. Geoff Ackermann of the South African National Roads Agency and Colleen de Villiers from the South African Weather Bureau for providing me with invaluable information.

Thanks go to the following people who assisted in fieldwork: Gordon O'Brien and Sizakele (DACEL). The following landowners for access to their properties during surveys: Harry van der Merwe, Johan van der Merwe, Jurg Haywood and to those farm owners that anticipate my future visits.

I would also like to thank Minette Bester for her help with the Afrikaans translation.

A special thanks to all my family and friends for being patient throughout my dissertation. My grateful thanks also goes to all those who contributed to this project, even in the smallest of ways.

Finally I would specially like to thank Mathew Ross for his unfailing encouragement, support and constant belief in me and to whom I owe the greatest gratitude. It is a pleasure to acknowledge his companionship during all fieldwork and both his practical co-operation and his helpful suggestions.
