

To my mother

„Die Familientradition lebt fort.“

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This work is the result of an academic endeavour which started nearly eight years ago with Professor Bruno Simma and Professor Volk of the University of Munich, who introduced me for the first time to the topic of international criminal law. Some four years later, I had the opportunity to broaden my knowledge of this field of law by obtaining an LL.M in International Public Law at the University of Stellenbosch. Thanks to my supervisor, Senior Lecturer GP Kemp, I was introduced to the complex topic of civil liability for human rights atrocities. After completion of my studies at Stellenbosch, I was determined to subject this topic to a further scrutiny. My supervisor, Professor HA Strydom enabled me to do so by accepting me as his doctoral candidate in January 2004.

I am beholden to the following people, who were crucial for the finalisation of this undertaking: SS Afrika, my girlfriend, for her love and her moral support. Professor HA Strydom who supported me in many ways but most of all, I thank him for his constructive and challenging criticism. I thank Professor George N Barrie for his intellectual curiosity and continuing interest in the topic. Lizette van Zyl, librarian, who allowed me to use the law library as my “personal office”. Marianne Potgieter, librarian, for her assistance and help with internet researches. Barrie Swanepoel and Pieter Hattingh, Library IT Dept, for their constant technical support and advice. Dr. Matthias Schiffer, Heidelberg, for his unwavering moral support and friendship. Uwe Bannow, my employer for supporting my academic aspirations. Peter “Piet” Wölfl and Norbert Pappert, my NCOs and comrades, who helped me to coordinate my academic aspirations with my military obligations.

And finally and most of all, I thank Helgard Renate Bachmann, my mother, for her motherly love, understanding and support during all my life.

Semper Fi!
