UNIVERSITY OF

UJ Woema on Wheels

It is estimated that between five and seven per cent of South Africans are moderately to severely disabled (Census 2001). Despite this large percentage of disabled people, few services and opportunities exist for people with disabilities to participate equally in society.

By die UJ is talle daadwerklike stappe reeds gedoen om die Universiteit vir alle studente en personeel so toeganklik moontlik te maak. Van die werk wat al gedoen is, is die wysigings van die helling van die opritte op die loopvlakke. Opritte en trapfysers is tussen vlakke aangebring wat nie voorheen toeganklik was nie. Die trapfysers is nie net tot hulp van persone met gestremdhede nie maar kan ook items soos teetrolles tussen die verskillende vlakke vervoer. Die nuwe woord wat hiervoor gebruik word is "universal design"

Voorsiening vir bergplek van elektriese rolstoel is gemaak waar die batterye van elektriese stoele gelaai kan word. Daar is ook na die glyvryheid van die vloere gekyk en bepaalde matte is aangebring om die probleem op te los. Toegewysde onderdak- en ander parkeerplekke is ook 'n prioriteit, terwyl aanpassings by die randstene gemaak is.

Furthermore the UJ has 10 students who use wheelchairs that are registered at the Office for People with Disabilities (OPD). Some of them come from disadvantaged families, finding it difficult to purchase lightweight wheelchairs. The UJ RAG Committee donated three lightweight wheelchairs, for the use of students on campus. The availability of these wheelchairs on the different campuses make life easier for wheelchair users at UJ who will now be able to move around independently and with greater ease.

A concerted effort is undertaken by the OPD, which was established in May 2005, to heighten staff and students' awareness regarding people with disabilities. They organized the Woema on Wheels race on 15 August 2008 for the third consecutive year. The race was organised in cooperation with the Association for the Physically Disabled and the UJ Student Representative Council. Able-bodied employees and students took part, one team member was blindfolded and one in a wheelchair. They raced through the campus to allow them to experience the challenges faced by disabled fellow students and colleagues on a daily basis.

Staff and students with disabilities at UJ vary and include blind and visually impaired, deaf and hearing impaired, wheelchair users and physically impaired, learning disabilities eg dyslexia, attention deficit disorder, psychological disabilities, including autism as well as other illnesses such as diabetes, epilepsy, cystic fibrosis and many more. A total of 188 students are currently registered with the OPD. Support includes arrangement of different concessions, test and exam writing, study material in alternative format, liaison with lecturers, faculties, deans as well as access issues on the different campuses.

The number of first year students registered at the UJ increased dramatically from 9 in 2004 to 81 this year. Furthermore the nearly 70 degrees were awarded to UJ students with disabilities since 2000. Students with disabilities also excel in sports. Some of their achievements include; eight provincial representatives in wheel chair basketball, one provincial representative in wheelchair tennis, three provincial representatives in table tennis, 13 provincial representatives in athletics (track and field), six provincial representatives in wheel chair dance, one provincial representative in power lifting and one provincial representative in cycling.

Maar daar kan nog meer gedoen word om die daaglikse omstandighede van persone met gestremdhede aan die UJ te verbeter. Volgens dr. Anlia Pretorius, Senior Koördineerder van die Kantoor vir Persone met Gestremdhede "lei onsensitiewiteit en oningeligtheid dikwels tot misverstande. Bewusmaking en sensitiewe opleiding is voortdurend nodig. Toeganklikheid op alle kampusse kan steeds verbeter. Ons konsentreer ook daarop om studente te leer om verantwoordelikheid te aanvaar en saam te werk om hulle studies suksesvol te voltooi. Dit dra ook by tot 'n beter aanpassing in die toekomstige werksplek – want dit is tog die doel van studie aan 'n universiteit," verduidelik dr Pretorius en Corné Engelbrecht.

CENTRE FOR SMALL BUSINESSES IN SOWETO

Less than two months after announcing the development of the Soweto Campus at UJ, the Centre for Small and Medium Enterprise Development (CSMED) was added to the list of prominent landmarks of the City of Johannesburg.

The establishment of the CSMED as a significant beacon in the higher education landscape of South Africa was celebrated during a memorable occasion marking the official launch of the Centre at the Soweto Campus on 22 September 2008. Mr Amos Masondo, the Mayor of Johannesburg and Prof Ihron Rensburg, the UJ's Vice-Chancellor, delivered the keynote addresses at the event.

The Centre will have development programmes for small businesses of all size. The objective is to grow small business from turnover of less than R10 000 per annum into entities that have turnover of more than R1 million. These development programmes will run alongside the normal fare of the UJ's Department of Entrepreneurship to ensure that students are exposed to real life SMMEs in Soweto.

Read more about this exiting development and see picture of the official opening in the next issue of U@UJ.

Culture survey underway

The submission period for the UJ Institutional Culture Survey closed middle August. An excellent response from close to 40 per cent of staff was received – thank you to everyone who took the time to participate. Some time was spent on data coding and analysis and during September where aspects of the findings were explored in focus groups. The Culture Survey is part of the UJ Culture Integration Project that attempts to bring together the three parent institutions into the UJ. The project is geared towards creating an inclusive and representative culture that celebrates our diversity and capitalises on its unique strengths. The survey will help UJ identify and celebrate what is unique so we can build on our strengths going forward.

Ms Thandeka Mgoduso

Thandeka strives for service excellence

"I have a great respect for and belief in people. That, coupled with excellence in everything you do, makes any challenge possible. Also do not forget the importance of showing integrity in your day to day activities" These are the sentiments of Ms Thandeka Mgoduso, newly appointed Executive Director: Human Resources (HR).

"I see my role at UJ to further implement the HR business partner model to get the best strategic benefit for human resources for the University and deliver the best possible service to the University and all its constituents. We have to determine what our competitive edge is and deliver on that," Thandeka said.

Prior to her position at UJ, she was the Executive Director and co-owner of Ayavuna Women's Investments. Thandeka is a well-known figure in the transport sector and her résumé includes the position of Executive Director: Strategic Transformation at Imperial Logistics. Researched a priority for Masuku

Dr Christopher Masuku who boasts a strong background, combined with a wealth of experience and knowledge, in research and development, recently took up the position of Executive Director: Research and Innovation.

Boasting a DSc from the Helsinki University of Technology, Finland as well as a Lic. of technology (Industrial Chemistry) and MSc Chem Eng from the university, Dr Masuku spent 15 years in Finland, where he was a recipient of the postgraduate grant of the Academy of Finland. UJ collaborates with Arnot Power Station

The Department of Educational Psychology at UJ joined hands with Arnot Power Station in Rietkuil, Mpumalanga to engage in a community project at a farm school in the Rietkuil area. The rationale for the project was to build on the Department of Educational Psychology's niche area, "community psychology", and secondly to become engaged in the quest for alleviating the scarce skills shortage in South Africa.

Arnot Power Station management sponsored the whole project, while institutions from the region, as well as UJ and Unisa made a contribution in the form of a career exhibition and the distribution of career and bursary information.

The project had different objectives. The most important for the Department was to ingrain the paradigm shift from an office based client service expectation of students to a community focused orientation by starting their orientation to the degree in the rural community and then move to the classroom. The master's degree students are a culturally diverse group with ages ranging from their twenties to fifties and bring a wealth of experience to the classroom. Changing the orientation from a classroom based week long session to a community outreach project where they could use their facilitation skills and knowledge of career guidance in schools, was an acknowledgement of their prior learning and an educationally sound move from the known to the unknown.

The Department wants to thank all the participants for their unique input and the relationships that have been established. The project will hopefully go on for many years and we hope to recruit some of the learners for UJ and make a contribution to alleviation of the scarce skills shortage in South Africa.

Help for xenophobic victims

Martin Luther King's famous words "I have a dream" led to historic changes in America. But Prof Herman van der Bank of the UJ's Department of Zoology in the Faculty of Science, did not have a dream – he simply could not sleep one night and contemplated on how to help the international students affected by the xenophobic violence earlier this year. He called on the Members of the Executive Committee who encouraged staff and students to participate in a drive to donate clothes and blankets to victims of the xenophobic violence. Great support was received from staff and students on all four campuses.

The donations were recently handed over to the xenophobic victims in Olifantsfontein. Everybody's contribution is greatly appreciated but people including Prof Herman van der Bank and Dr Erna Bruwer (Department of Zoology), Ms Monki Sebigi (Community Engagement), Prof Adam Habib and Ms Emelda Manjezi (Office of the Deputy Vice-Chancellor: Research and Innovation), Mr Roelof Hugo (Protection Services), Ms Eddie Lutsch (Faculty of Science) and Sarah Bacchus are a few names to be mentioned.

Dr Erna Bruwer (far left) and Ms Monki Sebigi (behind the box with the donations on the far right) did the hand-over of the contributions.

READING TO IMPROVE LEARNING?

The purpose of reading something is not to be able to store the whole text in your mind. What is important is that you be able to 'think' with the ideas presented in the reading material be it newspapers, magazines or textbooks which then leads to analytical thinking and ways of looking at issues from various angles.

The University in conjunction with the Department of Education's capacity development grant recently hosted a two day Southern African Symposium on reading to improve teaching and learning in higher education at the School of Tourism and Hospitality. The focus of this symposium was to ascertain whether various models and theories of reading may be applied as a learning tool in diverse higher education fields and to attempt to address throughput of students' lack of reading that impedes learning.

The symposium included presentations by various guest speakers such as Prof Mike Hart from the University of KwaZulu-Natal, Prof Elizabeth Pretorius and workshops by Prof Mike Hart, Dr Monareng and Margie Childs where delegates, including lecturers and directors from various extended learning and teaching programmes within the University and other institutions, were given the chance to ask questions and discuss issues they are faced with.

UJ Students who did some research on the use of the Teleconference facility on the Doornfontein Campus.

Success a call away

Are you tired of travelling many times a day to and from the Kingsway Campus for meetings? Do you find your time wasted because of travelling between campuses?

Have you ever considered using the UJ teleconference phone for your meetings to reduce travelling to and from Doornfontein Campus and Kingsway Campus? The Creative Services Department on Doornfontein Campus offers a teleconference phone to use for your emergency meetings, staff meetings with people on other campuses.

Students on the extended foundation programme did some research on the use of the teleconference phone and this is what they had to say "Success just a call away", "forget cell phones, public phones and travelling – stick to the best – teleconferencing."

For the use of Teleconference facility contact Julia Mabulele on 011 559 6533 or send an email to juliam@uj.ac.za

Push up the HEAT

The quality of being hot; high temperature – this is the meaning of heat according to the Concise Oxford Dictionary.

But did you know that HEAT can have another meaning, other than being hot? In the Information Systems environment of the Human Resource (HR) Division, HEAT has a total different meaning.

The Help Desk Automation Tool (HEAT) is an electronic tool which is used by HR to monitor progress with all incoming requests and assist them in giving feedback to UJ staff. When staff members contact the HR Division they will get a reference number generated by the HEAT system. This system allows the user to give regular updates to staff via automated email messages. This system will also ask staff to give feedback (via a link provided on an automated email) on the service rendered by the HR staff and in the process assist to collect valuable data to measure and improve HR client service. UJ staff is encouraged to use the opportunity to give honest feedback via the HR Customer Service Rating form. For more information on HEAT send an email to hris@uj.ac.za

The gala event of the MTN New Contemporaries Award 2008 was hosted by the UJ Art Gallery during July/August this year

MTN awards at UJ

The UJ Art Gallery hosted one of the most exciting and prestigious happenings on the South African arts calendar, the bi-annual MTN New Contemporaries Award 2008 gala event and exhibition, earlier this year.

One of the MTN SA Foundation's most renowned projects, this is a competition designed to promote talented, cutting-edge artists who have not yet received critical acclaim but who are positioned to be the next leaders in the art field.

The Foundation's guest curator, dynamic and respected Melissa Mboweni, identified Daniel Halter, Dineo Bopape, Michael Mac-

Garry and Themba Shibase as the four finalists after completing her country-wide research in numerous studios and galleries.

These young artists completed their final artworks for the exhibition, where after an independent judging committee, drawn from across the country; cast the final vote for the winner of this coveted award, Dineo Bopape. At the gala awards event at the UJ Art Gallery earlier this year this leading innovator won R50 000 in cash, while the finalists Daniel Halter, Themba Shibase and Michael MacGarry each took home R5 000. All received state-of-the-art cell phones.
